In the destruction of old letters, &c., Judge Meade was so unfortunate as to have destroyed by accident a few days since, the manuscript, nearly completed, with the dates, &c., of his "History of Men and Parties since the War." As stated in yesterday's GAZETTE, an interesting game of base ball was played Thursday between the first nine of the Alexandria Association and a nine from Washington, composed of two players from the Treasury Department, one from the Interior Department and six from the Stars, of Washington. Four of the Washingtonians were formerly members of the National nine. The first three innings were remarkable only for the looseness of the fielding of the Alexandria nine. The remainder of the game was very interesting. The score was 15 to 10 in favor of the Stars. The visitors by a unanimous rising vote decided that they had never enjoyed themselves more and hoped they would have the pleasure of playing "Alexandria" again. Some speech-making was indulged in, and a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Rammel and John Redlich, his efficient manager, for the excellent manner in which they were served. The Washingtonians highly approve the stand taken by "Alexandria" in refusing to play the Kendalls with a colored player, and say their action was applauded all over Washington. The first nine of the Association will play the War Department nine here this afternoon.
